

Andreas Krisch member of the board of European Digital Rights and Member of the Austrian Association for Internet-Users. He holds a degree in Information Systems and runs an IT company in Austria. His activities in the area of Human Rights in the Information Society include amongst others the participation in the Internet Advisory Council of the Austrian Federal Chancellery and contributions to the WSIS process. Mr. Krisch worked on issues regarding Privacy and the Internet of Things for several years and is member of the RFID Expert Group established by the European Commission.